Sundvolden Hotel

Sundvolden Hotel is an accommodation in the village of Sundvollen, Hole municipality in Buskerud county. The place has a history that goes back to 1648, when it was a restaurant and perhaps also accommodation there. In 1788, the inn was recommended as accommodation for travellers, with a tavern and an inn, and the sale of beer and spirits. The hotel grew strongly in the 19th century due to its location on the Bergen royal road, which came in 1805. In 1811, Sundvollen was awarded a formal royal grant to run an inn on the farm, and throughout the 19th century and well into the 20th century, Sundvolden is often visited by royalty from both Denmark and abroad. In 2011, Sundvolden Hotel was a gathering place and accommodation for relatives, aid crews and a large press gathering in connection with the terror attack on Utøya.

Utvika Farm and Camping

It all started in 1984 when the storehouse at Utvika Gård was renovated with a kitchen, bathroom and two bedrooms, for rental. Utvika Camping was completed on 8 July 1990, and now includes rental cabins and seasonal and tourist pitches for caravans, mobile homes and tents.

The over 100-year-old barn was modernized in 2019, with a reception, kiosk/mini market, café/restaurant, meeting rooms and 11 rooms for bed & breakfast. The pier at Utvika Camping is approx. 500 meters northeast of Utøya. During the terror in 2011, many young people who escaped from the island were rescued in small boats, and set ashore at Utvika Camping. Several of the camping tourists at Utvika helped in the rescue work.
